

THE NEW PLAY

"The Girl Patsy"

Caused Wild Night at Savoy Theatre.

It was a wild night at the Savoy. Incidentally, it was a very hot night for the season's "heat," and the vehicle wherein the act and was made Jane Maudlin Feigl's "The Girl Patsy." From a cursory glance at the audience it was evident that every "at-liberty" actor and actress east of the Alleghenies had gathered to do honor to the obsequies.

Saturday night was red hot; but all warmth melted abruptly on the orchestra side of the footlights. Indeed, at times, people were forced to stop fanning in order to shiver.

"The Girl Patsy" deals with a foundling who isn't a foundling; "the richest girl in the country, who isn't rich at all, and an artist who forgets to paint. Patsy, the foundling, meekly endures the scorn of the patrician Patricia for three long acts, and is rewarded in the fourth by the sweet knowledge that Patricia is the foundling and Patsy the heiress. The latter then takes, among Patricia's other perquisites, the heiress's artist-fiance and wealthy about the stage. For one awful moment it looked as if some one might carelessly leave a door open and permit aristocrats and merry villagers to mingle. But Patricia saved the day by clapping with a coachman, and the curtain, mercifully, fell before the girl Patsy could be sprung as a pleasant surprise on the imprisoned "400."

Despite the world-old situations wherein the piece hangs, it had redeeming features that, in a better play, might have scored decided hits. John Morris, for instance, as the hare-lipped man who does not speak a single comprehensible word, had a wholly unique part that merited a better setting, and he was genuinely funny. By the way, it is a fearful thing to hear a hare-lipped man talk when he is drunk. In one scene it took three actresses to translate his words. Melville Alexander, too, was original and clever as a footman who combined the hauteur of a James Yellowplush with a Chimney Padden imago.

Miss Mary Ryan, said to be a "discovery" of the author's, is a pretty, wistful looking little girl, and she played Patsy in a pretty, wistful father. Also the revelation of a country seat, with the Colorado-Madison comenomen of "La Favorita." Who would not be a three-act foundling for so glittering a fourth-act recompense?

The most sparkling dialogue of the evening was supplied by a hare-lipped drunkard, who interspersed his caveword talk with frequent wordless renderings of "The Good Old Summer Time," and by a Gallic maid, whose French accent was flawless except when it chanced to contain a French word. The pseudo heiress, too, got reckless and spoke six French sentences, very rapidly, right out loud where folks could hear her. The effect on the audience was electric, and one little man with pointed mustaches and an eyeglass was observed to consult furtively a pocket copy of "English as a Guide."

The play supplies the long-lost missing link between Fifth avenue and the dear old farm. The smartest folk in New York's smartest set (the audience are informed) are bottled up in an adjacent drawing-room waiting to witness a marriage, while a bevy of "Way Down Easters" are rambling merrily father, faintly reminiscent of "Merely Mary Ann." It is rather a pity that her New York debut should have been made under such conditions.

A. P. TERHUNE.

BROKER'S DEATH

DUE TO FRIGHT IN FLAT FIRE

While fire was raging in the fashionable apartment-house, the Britanny, at No. 24 West One Hundred and Second street, early to-day, Charles K. Northrup, an investment broker, died of heart disease, a gas main broke and ten families were rendered homeless. Twelve families escaped to the street by the fire-escapes, and while the house was still filled with smoke and burning thieves began to operate and looted more than one apartment.

The fire started in the trunk room in the basement and was discovered by Charles K. Zobel, who, with his wife and children, occupied apartments on the third floor. Zobel called Thomas Christopher, the negro elevator boy, who ran to One Hundred and Third street and Riverside Drive and tried to turn in an alarm. The boy did not

SPEEDY CURE OF MISS GOODE.

She is Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Writes Gratefully to Mrs. Pinkham.

For the wonderful help that she has found, Miss Cora Goode, 253 E. Chicago Avenue, Chicago, Ill., believes it her duty to write the following letter for publication, in order that other women afflicted in the same way may benefited as she was. Miss Goode is President of the Bryn Mawr Lawn Tennis Club of Chicago. She writes:

"I tried many different remedies to build up my system, which had become run down from long periods of rest and nervousness, but nothing seemed to help me. Mother is a great advocate of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for female troubles, having used it herself some years ago with great success. So I began to take it, and in less than a month I was able to get out of bed and out of doors, and in three months I was entirely well. Really I have never felt so strong and well as I have since."

No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Women who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, bloating or flatulence, displacement of organs, inflammation or ulceration, can be restored to perfect health and strength by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Her experience is very great, and she gives the benefit of it to all who stand in need of wise counsel. She is the daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham and for twenty-five years has been advising sick women free of charge. Address Lynn, Mass.

understand the alarm and the fire had been burning twenty minutes before a policeman happened along and called the engines.

When Engine Company No. 75 arrived the tenants were hanging out of the windows, crying for help. The house was filled with smoke from cellar to roof. Hook and Ladder Company No. 2 raised twenty-five and thirty-five foot ladders, and the women, with their children, were brought down from the fire-escapes. The temporarily homeless persons were taken over next door to the Herald Court apartments.

The fire made their way into the cellar. The heat of the flames had melted the gas pipes and the gas was everywhere. Part of the firemen died in their tracks and were dragged to the street by their companions. Several were thought to be in a serious condition for a time, but all recovered after treatment by a physician.

The ten firemen were still stretched out in a line on the sidewalk when a woman came rushing from the Herald Court and begged:

"Please send me a doctor! Please send me a doctor!"

Two physicians followed the woman to the third floor and there found Mr. Northrup gasping for breath. He had heart disease and the excitement had been too much for him. He died almost immediately.

The firemen had not got the fire under control before the robbery began. Mr. Zobel reported that he had been robbed of a valuable silver toilet service and a Mr. Bandier reported that he had lost a gold watch and probably other valuables. It is thought likely that the thieves also visited other apartments.

A report of the robbery was made to Fire Chief Croker.
